REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET.

GOVERNOR,
JAMES A. BEAVER, of Centre county.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
W. T. DAVIES, of Bradford county.

JUDGE OF SUPREME COURT,
WILLIAM HENRY RAWLE, of Phila.

SECRETARY OF INTERNAL AFFAIRS,
JOHN M. GREER, of Butler county.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

WE nominate for Congressman at large Galusha A. Grow—a statesman of ripe experience, the father of the homestead law, once speaker of the National House of representatives, and a man who would sweep the state from end to end like a hurricane. If Mr. Grow will take the nomination he is, in our opinion, the strongest and perhaps the best man in the state, and will strengthen the ticket.

THE straightout greenbackers of Maine have nominated Solon Chase for governor.

OUT IN California the ceremonies of Decoration Day were varied by burning up a small town.

COLONEL INGERSOLL can say beautiful things about the dead who died for their country's sake, but in his unchristian creed there is no place for their departed souls.

MR. CHARLES S. WOLF, is reported to have predicted a poll of 250,000 votes for the Independent ticket. Wonder if Mr. Wolf ever takes anything stronger than soda water in his.

A LARGE canoe in excellent condition has been found near Bex, 4,000 feet above the sea level and nearly 3,000 feet above the valley of the Rhone. No Lacustrine relics have ever before been found in Switzerland at such an elevation.

GREAT fires in the extreme west are the order now. Tombstone has just been devastated to the tune of half a million of dollars, and the largest smelting works in the world, located near Leadville, are reported destroyed, involving a loss of over three hundred thousand dollars.

THE nomination of Gen. Beaver for Governor seems to be worrying the life out of the Watchman editors. Why this anxiety, Pete? you'll only fret yourself into a fever and increase the General's majority. You must keep cool or you won't live to howl over his election.

DISPATCHES from all parts of the country say that Decoration Day was never so widely observed. There were ceremonies in many towns that heretofore have neglected to honor the dead. Many loving hands carried flowers to Garfield's tomb, and the grave of General Burnside was the scene of fitting ceremonies.

THE false report circulated by some newspaper writer, who cared more for notoriety than truth, in regard to Senator Cameron and the tariff was swallowed by many hungry newspapers in this State with such avidity that indicated they had not had such a sweet morsel for years. But since Senator Cameron's emphatic denial the sweetness has turned sour and made them all sick.

THE memorial window dedicated by the Harvard Class of 1860 to their fellow-students who fell in the Rebellion is now almost completed, and will soon be placed in position. It is the work of Mr. La Earge, and is said to be an admirable example of his taste and skill. It represents a host advancing to battle, led by two persons, one holding aloft a standard and the other poising a lance.

The Moslem Rising in Egypt.

It is now more than half a century since any one of the Moslem populations that lie in and about the Mediterranean has produced a man or men ready to risk something in founding a new order to maintain Moslem rule. Bosnia might, if the land had not been crushed by Austria; for the rest, the Moslem ebb of the last half century, which began on the Danube and lies now in sight of Constantinople, which has surrendered nearly every island in the Mediterranean and a broad belt of the African coast, has shown at points fierce resistance to the European advance; but nowhere a capacity to organize a new condition of affairs, to rebuild and create anew a Moslem state resting on a faith still, in its decadence, the most vital of Oriental religions, the only one which proselytes. Such capacity to found a state and make new combinations as has appeared in lands and provinces where the old order grew weak has been altogether among Christian populations.

The signal, salient fact in the Egyptian situation is that it is a Moslem revival. Weak or strong, successful or not, wise or foolish, Arabi Bey and his colleagues represent the revival of Mohammedanism, which has been for twenty years the significant fact of the Eastern world. Patriotism, in the Western sense, is unknown in the East. A man fights for his creed, not his nation, and the intrigues which centre about the Egyptian movement on its native and local side turn on this fact. It is this which makes the Moslem preachers prominent in the Egyptian agitation, which renders the movement dangerous to the life of every European in Cairo and Alexandria, and makes it impossible to arrest a mere adventurous colonel like Arabi Bey off hand, while three years since, Ismail, the rightful and recognized ruler of Egypt, was bundled down his palace stairs by the representative of France and England, and shipped off like a convict. In the face of this revival of strong Moslem feeling, this vague searching for Moslem rule, an ironclad fleet and a vigorous identical note to the Sultan, at once the chief of the Moslem world and the feudatory head of Egypt, is needed to force compliance with the demands of the Powers.

All this complicates and renders difficult the task of France and England, which is to control Egypt and keep up the costly European staff by which taxes are collected to pay interest on a usurious and unjust debt, without any actual use of force or the employment of troops. At the last moment, neither France nor England can trust the other to occupy Egypt; a joint occupation opens endless difficulties, and the employment of Turkish troops is open to the double objection that the Porte has much to gain and nothing to lose by stimulating the Moslem sentiment, and that the extension of the rule of the Turkish pashas has been vehemently denounced by Mr. Gladstone. All Arabi's power will go to pieces under the first touch of ferce, and the Moslem enthusiasm of Cairo collapse as completely; but the difficulty of bringing force to bear has only begun to be practically felt now that it is attempted.—Phil'a Press.

THE New York Sun says that young men of American birth and a liberal education are unable to get anything to do or make their way in life because a student or a set of men, most of whom are of foreign birth or foreign parentage, are driving them to the wall. The facts are against this theory. As far as American irth is concerned a most noticeable thing in the public life of this country is that, with an enormous foreign population, the overwhelming majority of the leaders of public affairs is made up of men born in this country whose ancestors were also usually born here. Congress has by no means as many men of foreign birth in it, in proportion, as the country at large. Our railroads are generally managed by the American born, the high places in the professions are held by them, and our bench is almost exclusively American. As to a liberal education, the facts are less accessible, because the proportion of College graduates to the general community is very small, altogether less than in the two countries with which the United States is most frequently compared—Germany and England. But here also public life and public success has a much larger proportion of the educated than the country at large. The Sun should not discredit the source to which its own success is due.

The Independent Movement.

The pretentious claim has been put forward that the Independent convention was a representative body, that it came fresh from the people. This is a most stupendous misrepresentation of the facts. The truth is that the delegates to the so-called republican convention at Philadelphia were informally chosen in most cases without any election at all and in many instances were self-constituted representatives. These facts we glean from the papers of all parties published in the counties that these men pretended to represent. Our own county had no pretender there, but this is not the fault of the would-be reformers who claim to be so anxious that boss rule should be stamped out and that delegates to nominating conventions should be selected by a vote of all the members of the party at a fairly contested delegate election. A gentleman from this town who has been a leading politician in the past but says that he is now out of politics, was in Philadelphia at the time their convention was in session. Although not claiming to have any authority from any source to act for the republicans of this county, he was urged by some of the leading spirits of the independent movement to join in their deliberations as a delegate so that they might have the satisfaction of making the empty boast that they had a representative from Beaver's own county. Are these the methods by which these self-styled reformers carry out one the leading reforms upon which they claim justification for the rebellion against the party with which they have in the past affiliated? In speaking upon this subject the Harrisburg Telegraph says:

"The Irishman is not alone in his love of a fight. To the average American peace seems to be a species of dry rot, which merits nothing but his most profound contempt. This pugnacious, combative spirit makes for him a new political party with every returning campaign. A Barn-Burner, a Silvergrey Whig, a Free-Soiler, a Know-Nothing, Liberal and scores of other names might be recalled which have marked the ephemeral excrescences upon the body politic, born of the disposition to "hit a head whenever you can see it." Some of these offshoots from the old parties live for a brief season, and measurably accomplish their political purposes. Others were like the summer cloud and morning dew, dissipated by the strong light of substantial issues. But of all the fading, fleeting factions which ever stirred the bile or excited the laughter of the people, the last is the weakest both in material and pretended reason."

"Under the cry of civil service reform it is led by trading politicians of the smallest calibre, and under the pretense of reforming the political methods of the greatest political organization of this country it secures its first convention by tricks that would put to blush a South Carolina Bourbon. While declaring that it came fresh from the people to do their will, it was composed of delegates self selected and unknown as such by the people of the districts."

Commencement Speeches in Season

The season of commencements of colleges and other educational concerns is close at hand. It comes as regularly as the shad season, the strawberry season and also the welcome season for going out of town. It awakens emotions of palpitating pride in the hearts of the young men and women who are to stand on platforms and pronounce valedictories and other speeches. It arouses professors and tutors to extraordinary diligence in putting their best educational foot foremost. It kindles in the souls of friends and relations of graduating students hopes and longings that the graduates in whom they have a particular interest may acquit themselves better than any other graduates either of the past ages, the present days or of all time to come. The commencement season is therefore a benefit in many ways to several honored classes of society.

And yet there are particulars in which commencements might do more than they do for the world, for the graduates and for the institutions whose fame they celebrate. Most of these occasions are more notable for the exhibitory character of the exercises than for anything which tends to promote the cause of real education. If the exhibits were such as to show what the students have attained to in actual knowledge it would be well. Instead of this they generally run to speech-making, which is too generally of the most vapid kind, making up in stiltedness of style what it lacks in solidity of material. It is not always the fault of the young persons who prepare and deliver the speeches. If left to themselves these young persons might at least infuse into their compositions the element of originality. When a party of very perfunctory professors sit on the composition of a student and trim and carve it to suit their own views of what a commencement essay ought to be, the first thing they do is to knock most of the originality out of it. They just reflect that if they allow too much of this element the result will be to cast reflections on the essays, speeches and compositions of previous years. These were remarkable for their lack of sparkle and for their general adherence to one regulation model.

To such an extent does the dignity of dullness pervade the commencement compositions that an unprejudiced stranger in attendance during their delivery might well wonder why some of the hearers stamp on the floor with their heels and violent-beat the palms of their hands together. On inquiry he is told that these manifestations of applause are by kind relations and friends. It is not only the relations of the speaker who is speaking his piece who applaud him, but the relations and friends of all the other speakers also, for all who are bound by a bond of sympathy towards any of the graduates naturally feel disposed to help the whole suffering lot along. Sympathy and applause so often take the place of floral offerings as stiff as those which the undertakers supply to funerals that there is a talk of issuing an edict to the effect that "friends will please forbear from furnishing flowers." This would be one step toward distinguishing a commencement from a funeral.—Phil'a Times.

THE materials of which the late Independent Convention was composed are puzzling the press of the interior. H. S. Winter, who is down as a representative of Juniata, is wholly unknown in that county, The same is the case with an alleged delegate from Cameron county. John S. Haynes, of Clinton county, signed as a delegate from Clearfield, where there was no meeting to choose any delegate. A couple of men appeared as from Columbia county, where also there was no meeting to elect delegates. Finally, so far as heard from, George E. Mapes, a pretended Senatorial delegate from Warren, is a resident of Philadelphia, and Warren had no chosen delegates.

THE seventeen year locusts are announced for this summer. As they are announced every year their arrival is another thing.

"Is Life worth Living?"

It was November's days, dark and chill, that used to be selected by the suicides. Has the casual reader remarked the amazing number of self-murderers this Spring? There is something absolutely disturbing in the daily calendar of self-inflicted death. A tally kept from the 15th of February until May 30, reveals more than two hundred cases, the majority young men under thirty and young girls under twenty-three—that is to say in the consummate flower and bloom of life. What is even more perplexing, is that in nearly every case the suicides were in happy condition—no insuperable difficulties, no apparent cause for unhappiness!

What can drive a child of ten or fifteen years to self-slaughter? It is impossible to conceive the sunny estate of childhood driven into life's penumbra so far that the black gulf should seem a relief—yet the statistics show that of the dead of the year fully a score are children self-immolated. Some few died upon the altar of love, taking too seriously parental commands, but the majority are young men and young women whose lines were, if not in pleasant places, so near to them that it depended upon themselves only to attain the sunshine.

How deep is the sentiment, and how wide-spread—"Is life worth living?" Is it indifference to the future, or abhorrence of the ken of wicked men that inspires these long lists of self murdered to quit the world? Why should a young man of twenty-five fly to the ills he knows not when he has really passed the worst than can beset him here? If it is not all of life to live nor all of death to die, it certainly is not a more inviting prospect to obtrude on the fates that attend on the portal, than to combat the disasters that beset us here.

The striking thing in the case of suicides is the striking universality of the evidence, that only men and women of sensibility, best fitted for companionship, esteem and love, are those who fly most impulsively from the confidence of their kind to the uncertain toleration of the grave. It may be that the tender sympathy we feel for the pallid victim of rash impetuosity might not be elicited, if he or she stood before us in the flesh, suggesting desperation and death. It is for the dead that our sympathies go out most unreservedly—the accent of the grave has a sincerity that breaks down every barrier—shames the most incorrigible cynicism. But this speculation does not simplify the mystery, why the gladdest season of the year should be selected in this country for self-destruction, when in other countries the suicidal classes wait for the dull, inanimate lowering days of autumn? But why suicide in a country like this? The serious question is worth the scrutiny of our scientific illumenati, and the facts are not far to seek.—Phil'a Press.

BISHOP FOSS, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who has for some weeks been seriously ill at his home in St. Paul, Minn., belongs to a family that has exerted a marked influence upon the course of the Methodist denomination in this country. His father was for many years a prominent member of the New-York Conference. His eldest brother, now deceased, was a remarkably able pulpit orator and was a life-long intimate friend and coadjutor of Dr. John McClintock. His youngest brother died at the age of twenty-four, but had already achieved wide renown as a brilliant preacher and able professor in Wesleyan University. Bishop Foss, who is now forty-eight years of age, has been pastor of several large churches, and was for five years president of Wesleyan University. At the General Conference of 1880 he was elected to the office of Bishop, which he now holds. News of his progress toward renewed health is anxiously watched for by thousands.

NEARLY the whole business portion of the town of Willows, in Colusa county, California, was recently destroyed by fire. All the hotels were burned, and only the bank and one store were saved. The loss is estimated at $175,000. Steps have already been taken to rebuild the burned district.

IN the University of Rinten, in Germany, is one of the earliest specimens of paper made from linen. It is a document signed and sealed by Adolphus, Count of Schaumburg, and bears date 1239. This conclusively establishes the fact beyond dispute that linen paper was then already in use.

DURING the present season the importation of potatoes received at New York amounted to 4,500,000 bushels, which were sold at about two-thirds the price of the home production. Large amounts of the imported potatoes, however, on account of delays by vessels getting ice-bound, have been unfit for sale, but the above is the amount put upon the market.

Getting no answer, Schreiber feommitted suicide.

Poetry.

ATHENS.

BY M. E. WILLIS.

Near to the sun and southern breeze where thy
Fair plains stretch out to sea, the blessed gods
Did first unveil their mighty arts to man.
'Twas here the awful Zeus did unfold
His councils just and wise, to guide the great
And aid the weak. His gracious hand bestowed
All blessings from the sky in form of rain
And hail and snow or gentle dew. But once
His fury justly roused, the heavens flamed
With lightning darts, and thunderbolts earth to
Her centre shook; while men their faces hid
In fear. One day the land and sea rejoiced,
For from the hand of mighty Zeus sprung
A fair young maid in armor dressed; within Her hand a scroll she bore which from that time
Athens has unfurled by slow degree
And portioned out to mortal man his due
Of knowledge written there. The first great
Plan she formed on earth was to invite the wise
Cecrops to land upon the bay lined shores
Of Attica, and found a city vast,
Whose fame should go throughout the world and last
Until the end of time, as birth-place of
The arts and all the modern sciences.
So Athens rose high on the sacred rock,
A natural throne by nature placed, whereon
To build a kingdom fit to rule the world.
Cecrops first to the gods a temple
Reared, their lasting favor to obtain; then round
This holy edifice the city grew
In size and strength until she soon become Sole mistress of the land and sea. The rod
By fair Athene planted in the soil
Of Attica had taken root, and now
Brought forth the olive tree whose fruits the gods
Had blessed and made to yield an hundred fold.
In juicy richness none surpassed, so kings
Across the sea the olive craved and brought Much goods to interchange. 'Twas thus the land
Grew rich but not alone, for knowledge grew
Apace. In accents sweet the poet sung;
With wondrous eloquence the teachers taught
The rising youth; and laws were made whose fame
Has passed from age to age and all men see
Their excellence. In art the city soon
Showed wondrous skill; the gods themselves came down
On earth to copied be, and hence the grace
And perfect beauty found in Grecian art
Oh! Athens, great and glorious, that wast
Preferred by man before all cities on
The earth, where is thy glory now? The gods
Did prosper thee, the muses long did sing
Thy praise in music sweet as angels sing,
The land and sea thy mighty influence felt
And must forever in some measure feel.
But glory has departed from thy name;
The columns of thy holy temples have
Been borne away their beauty to adorn
The stranger's gates; thy finest works of art Lie scattered through the world with none to save,
Thy people cry for aid, but no Codrus
In armor comes to rescue them from friend
Or foe; he sleeps forever with thy glory in the grave.

—Sleep, comrades, sleep and rest
On this field of Grounded Arms,
Where foes no more molest,
Nor sentry's shot alarms!

Ye have slept on the ground before,
And started to your feet
At the cannon's sudden roar,
Or the drum's redoubling beat.

But in this camp of Death
No sound your slumber breaks;
Here is no fevered breath,
No wound that bleeds and aches.

Your silent tents of green
We deck with fragrant flowers;
Yours has the suffering been—
The memory shall be ours.

—From an unpublished poem by Longfellow in June Atlantic.

—To church the two together went,
Both, doubtless, on devotion bent.
The parson preached with fluent ease
On Pharisees and Sadducees.
And as they homeward slowly walked
The lovers on the sermon talked.
And he—he deeply loved the maid—
In soft and tender accents said:
"Darling, do you think that we Are Pharisee and Sadducee?"
She flashed on him her bright black eyes
In one swift look of vexed surprise;
And thus he hastened to aver
He was her constant worshipper.
"But, darling, I insist," said he,
"That you are very fair-I-see;
I know you don't care much for me,
And that makes me sad-you-see."

—Somebody's lips were close to mine;
Thus tempted I couldn't resist.
Roguish and rosy, a sweet little mouth
Was suddenly, softly kissed.

Somebody's eyes looked up and frowned
With such reproving glance.
"If kisses were wicked?" I asked my pet,
Then the eyes began to dance.

And, smiling the little maiden answered,
As I knelt there at her feet:
"They must be just a little bit naughty,
Or they never would be so sweet."

Our Story Teller.

Love and House Cleaning.

"Saidee! Saidee! Where are you? Why don't you answer me when I call?"

"Yes, Aunt Leah—I am coming in a minute."

"In a minute!" sarcastically repeated the old lady. "It's always in a minute' with you, Saidee! But, I suppose, because I'm old and helpless, my comfort is a matter of no consequence whatever."

"Dear Aunt Leah, you must not think that!" answered a bright, cheery voice; and Saidee Lynn came into the room, with a little tray, where was arranged, on a snowy napkin, some tea biscuit, half a dozen pink radishes, a few thin-cut shavings of smoked beef, and a little pot of tea with a cup and saucer of old blue china which would have been invaluable to a collector. "You see I had you in my mind all the time, Aunt Leah," she said, merrily. "I gathered the radishes from our own garden. Don't they look nice?"

Aunt Leah, a withered little, old lady, in a dress of worn black silk, and sharp, gray eyes, peering through gold-bound spectacles, tasted of the tea, and shook her head.

"It's too weak," said she. "It isn't fit to drink."

"I put all the tea in there was in the canister, Aunt Leah," said Saidee, with a distressed countenance.

Aunt Leah pushed away the cup, with an expression of distaste.

"It is as I might have expected," said she. "My nieces have too little thought for my comfort to study my poor and few necessities. Never mind the tea; I can drink cold water, I dare say!"

Saidee wrung her hands in despair. How could she tell this weak, feeble old lady above whose declining years hung the threatening Damocles sword of heart disease, of their narrowing circumstances of the empty exchequer, the clamoring creditors, the pitful straits to which they were reduced.

"What shall I do?" she asked herself, as she went slowly back to the little kitchen of the ruinous Gothic cottage, which they had obtained for a ridiculously low rent because it was ruinous. "I've borrowed of the rector's wife twice, and I'm ashamed to go there again, and I've sold everything I can lay my hands on. But," glancing up at a picture which hung in the hall beyond, "there's the Velasquez still. A Velasquez is always worth money. Belle will scold about parting with it, and Aunt Leah will mourn, but we can't live on air and dew, like fairies. I'll take it down to Mr. Bruner, the artist, this afternoon, and ask him to get us a purchaser. Poor people, such as we are, can't afford to retain family relics."

And so, when Aunt Leah was indulging in her afternoon nap, and Belle, the beauty of the family, was ironing out the flounces of her white muslin dress for the morrow's picnic, valiant Saidee climbed on a chair, took the unframed picture down (it was the head of some old Spanish grandee, with a stiff pointed ruff, and an evil leer in the eyes), wrapped it up in a newspaper, and crept across the meadow with it to the village.

Mr. Bruner was in his studio—a grizzle-headed, blunt old gentleman, in a belted linen blouse and a faded velvet cap. He nodded kindly at Saidee, who had once taken a few lessons from him; but when she displayed the canvas he shook his head.

"How much do you think it is worth?" asked Saidee, wistfully.

"Nothing!" said Mr. Bruner.

"But," cried the girl, "it is a Velasquez!"

"That a Velasquez?" said Mr. Bruner, contemptuously. "My dear, there isn't a picture dealer in the country who would give fifty cents for it. It's a mendacious imitation, and a wretched one at that!"

So Saidee tied up the poor picture and went home again, shedding a few tears as she walked under the whispering trees.

"My last hope gone," she thought. "But I'll not tell Aunt Leah or Belle that it is an imposture. They have always taken such innocent pride in the Velasquez."

As she came past the old brick house at the foot of the Locust Lane a load of furniture was being carried in, for it was the second week in May. Wicker chairs, twined with blue ribbon, a cottage piano, cases of books, engravings, bird cages, plants—all sorts of pretty things.

Saidee paused and looked at them not without interest.

"I wonder who our new neighbors are to be?" she thought.

Just then, out trotted a stout, cherry-cheeked old lady, with her cap all on one side, and a worsted shawl tied over her shoulders.

"Oh," said she; "are you the young woman who disappointed us yesterday about cleaning?"

"No," said Saidee, crimsoning to the temples.

"Oh, dear! oh, dear!" said the old lady; "what is to became of us? All the furniture coming in and my daughter lame from falling off the step-ladder, and the girl gone, and—but," with an eager look, "perhaps you can recommend some one to help us settle?"

"I am sorry to say that I cannot," answered Saidee, and she vanished beyond the lilac hedge, rather amused at the mistake which the old lady had made.

Belle was full of news that evening.

"Oh, Saidee," she cried, "such a nice family is moving into the Locust House!"

"Yes," said Saidee; "I saw the furniture cart at the door, as I came back from the village, this afternon."

"Oh, the village," said Belle, tossing her blonde head. "It's strange, Saidee, how much time you get to run about and enjoy yourself, while I am drudging at home. But there's a young gentleman there—the handsomest man, Alice Aiken says, that she ever saw—and Mr. Pyle knows him, and he is to be at the picnic to-morrow, to get acquainted with the young people of the neighborhood. Won't it be delightful?"

"Very," said Saidee, indifferently.

But while Belle was talking, she had made up her mind what to do on the day of the May picnic.

Early in the morning, while the flush of sunrise was still crimsoning the sky, and blonde Belle lay asleep with her yellow hair in crimping pins, Saidee arose, dressed herself quietly and slipped out of the back door like a little gray shadow.

At eight o'clock, Aunt Leah rapped with her cane on the ceiling of her room, which was directly beneath the one occupied by her nieces. Belle made her appearance presently, in a faded calico wrapper, rubbing her eyes after a drowsy fashion.

"Where's breakfast?" said Aunt Leah.

"Where's Saidee?" counterquestioned Belle. "Oh, I know the selfish thing! She has got up early and gone down into the woods to get some pink azaleas for her hair before the other girls think of it. She wants to astonish us all at the picnic. But I think she might have told me!"

"I'm afraid Saidee thinks more of herself than she does of us," said Aunt Leah sourly.

And Belle, in a very ill humor, began to prepare the breakfast—a task generally assumed by her elder sister.

While Saidee, hurrying down the path by the swamp, took the short cut across the clover meadow, and was presently knocking at the door of the brick house where the load of furniture had stood the day before.

The old lady with the crooked cap and the cherry cheeks came to the door.

"Have you engaged anyone to help you get settled?" said Saidee, blushing very prettily.

"We can't hear of a soul!" said the old lady. "Every one is engaged just now, and—"

"If you thought I could be of use," faintly began Saidee.

"Bless me, child!" said the old lady, "you are too slight and small, besides," looking closer at her, "you are a lady."

'But I know how to clean house for all that," said Saidee, valiantly. "I've done it every year at home. We are ladies, but we are not people of means. It is necessary that I should earn a little money, and—"

"Come in, my dear," said the old lady, "come in and have a cup of coffee with us. I am Mrs Hartwick—and this is my daughter Kate."

"Saidee Lynn!" exclaimed the soft voice of a young girl, lying with sprained ancle on the sofa.

To her amazement, our heroine recognized one of her schoolmates, Katherine Hartwick, who had graduated in the same class with her, at boarding school, two years ago.

"But you surely never have come here to—work?' said Kate, in amazement.

"Yes, I have!" said brave Saidee. "Why is it any less creditable to clean paint and wash windows than to play croquet or do Kensington stitches?" And my Aunt Leah has lost all her little property, and we are very, very poor! So, now you know all about it. And when I have eaten my breakfast, if Mrs. Hartwick will give me a cleaning cloth and plenty of soft soap, I'll show her what I can do!"

So that Miss Lynn was mounted on a step-ladder, polishing off an antique mirror, when Katie's soft voice was heard, saying:

"Oh, Harry! is that you! We supposed of course you were at the picnic. Miss Lynn, this is my brother Harry. Harry, let me present you to Saidee Lynn, my dear old schoolmate, who has come here to help us clean house."

Miss Lynn made as graceful a bow as she could under the circumstances. Mr. Harry Hartwick inclined his head.

"At the picnic, indeed!" he retorted merrily. "Not at all. I've been hunting high and low for some one to help you, and for lack of any success I have returned to do a little white-washing myself."

"Oh, have you?" said Saidee. "I know such a nice recipe for kalsomine—as white as alabaster, and it won't rub off at all."

"Let's make it," said Mr. Hartwick, promptly.

No picnic could ever have been more delightful than this day among dust, white-wash, scouring-sand and brooms.

Kate, on her sofa, hemmed curtains; Mr. Hartwick bustled to and fro; Saidee, with her curly hair tied up in a handkerchief, scoured paint and Harry whitened ceilings; and at twilight they had three rooms in perfect order.

"We have achieved wonders," said Kate, looking around at the neatly tacked carpets—the soft garnet plush hangings—the pictures on the walls—the crystal brightness of the windows—while Mrs. Hartwick took Saidee mysteriously to one side.

"My dear," said she, "I do not know how to thank you sufficiently. But I am ashamed to offer you a dollar and a half, although—"

"But I shall not be ashamed to take it," said Saidee, smiling. "Why should I? That is, if you really think I have earned it."

"My dear you have more than earned it," said the old lady; "and if you could possibly come to-morrow—"

"Of course I will come," said Saidee.

Weary as she was, Saidee went around by the village to buy some Young Hyson tea for the old lady before she returned to the Gothic cottage.

"Well," she cried brightly, to her sister, "what sort of a day did you have at the pic-nic?"

"Awfully stupid!" yawned Belle. "And the handsome young gentleman from Locust Lane didn't come at all."

"Didn't he?" said Saidee.

"And where have you been?" demanded Belle, in an injured tone.

"Oh, spending the day with a neighbor!" said Saidee, with a laugh.

They finished the house-cleaning that week. Mr. Harry Hartwick found it necessary, we may add, to walk home with Saidee the next, evening, and he developed a remarkable talent in the amateur painting and kalsomining line, before they got through.

"Isn't she pretty, Harry?" said Kate, when at last they were settled comfortably, and Saidee had gone home for good.

"She is pretty," said Harry, enthusiastically; "and she is brave, and she isn't afraid of honest work; and altogether she is my beau ideal of a girl."

"Mamma," whispered Kate, laughing after her brother had gone out. "I believe our Harry is in love with Saidee Lynn."

"I'm sure I don't blame him," said Mrs. Hartwick. "She is a little jewel."

Aunt Leah never knew where the Young Hyson tea came from, nor the spongecake, nor the white grapes, nor all the little luxuries which had cheered her of late; nor did she suspect anything until one day Harry Hartwick came to her and formally asked her for her niece's hand in marriage.

"Well, I never!" said Aunt Leah.

"But how did you ever become so well acquainted with him, Saidee?" questioned Belle, half pleased, half jealous.

And then, under solemn seal of secrecy, she told Belle all; and Belle declared that it was too romantic for anything, never pausing to think that real life is as full of romance as a summer meadow with butter cups, and that fortune comes to those only who go bravely out to seek fortune.

A Competent Customer.

"Is the gentleman who knows everything in?" stammered a vision of golden hair and sea blue eyes, as she stood timidly beside the managing editor's desk yesterday afternoon.

"Everything about what?" asked the editor, clawing under his desk for his shoes and trying to hide his stocking feet under him. "Upon which particular branch do you seek information."

"I don't know exactly what to do," pouted the strawberry lips. "Pa says I can only have one dress this spring, and I don't know how to make it up. I thought the gentleman who answers questions could tell me."

"H'm!" muttered the managing editor. "He has gone up in Maine to find out why geese always walk in single file. An 'Anxious Inquirer' wants to know. What kind of a dress had you thought of getting?"

"That's what I want to know. I want something that will look well with terra cotta gloves."

"Yes, yes," murmured the editor. "Then you should get one of these green things with beads that turn all kinds of colors, and some fringe and fixings of that kind."

"Would you have it cut princess or wear it with a polonaise?" she inquired, looking at him searchingly.

"You—you might have it princess around the neck and a row of polonaises at the bottom," suggested the editor. "That's going to be very fashionable, and a couple of hip pockets would set it off royally."

"I don't know," murmured the beauty, "I haven't seen any of that style. Do you know whether panniers are worn bouffant this season, or whether the skirt is tight?"

"Oh, certainly!" replied the editor. They are made with all the bouffants you can get on them. Some have even sixteen button bouffants, and there was a lady in here yesterday who had a pannier that came clean up to her neck. I should have it pretty bouffant if it was my dress."

"Well," stammered the blushing blossom, "would you box plait the skirt or shirr it?"

"Shirr it, by all means?" exclaimed the editor. "Shirr it straight up and down, and fasten it with these loops of black tape."

"You mean frogs?" asked the beauty.

"No, no. These big loops that slip over two buttons. That sets off the shirrs and gives a sort of tout to the ensemble," and the editor leaned back and smiled superior.

"Don't you think revers of a lighter shade would look pretty?" she inquired.

"They'll do to fix up the back, but I wouldn' put 'em on the front," answered the editor sagely. "Revers are very well to trim a hat with, but they don't set off a dress front,"

"How would you have the corsage?"

"I wouldn't have any at all. You could look much better without one."

"Sir!" she exclaimed, rising.

"Oh, if you insist you might have a small one, certainly not over three inches long, for short dresses are the style now."

"You—you don't seem to understand—" she commenced.

"Oh, don't I," he retorted. "That's what I'm here for. I think there is nothing so lamentable as to see a young lady dragging her corsage through the mud and dust. Still, if you want one, you should have it, so you can take it off when you go on the street and only wear it at home. They are hard to handle and not one woman in a hundred can kick her corsage gracefully.

"I—I am very much obliged to you," she murmured, "you are very good, I'm sure."

"Don't mention it," replied the editor, politely, "I think when you get it shirred and revered and polonaised and princessed, you'll like it very much. You might get a sash and some big buttons to put on behind, or if you'd like another style better, you might trim the whole front with bouffants and wear the pannier for a hat."

"Oh, thank you, sir!" exclaimed the blushing bud, as she scuttled down stairs.

"Swipes!" roared the managing editor, with a complacent smile and glance of approval at himself in the glass, "Swipes, you may tell the foreman to send me a proof of the Fashion Notes as soon as they come in. I have observed that a great many errors have crept in lately."

Brown's eye blacked: They were discussing religious questions. Said Brown, "I tell you that, if the other animals do not exist after death, neither does man. There is no difference between man and beast." "If anybody could convince me of that it would be you, Brown," replied Deacon Jones demurely.

A gentleman went into a dry goods store yesterday and ask for ten yards of naked cambric. The young lady blushed and said: "I guess you mean undressed cambric?" "Oh, yes! that's it!"

Mellville's Phantom.

The wife of Engineer Mellville, the gallant officer of the luckless Arctic exploring steamer Jeannette, who is now searching for his lost comrades around the ice-bound coast of Northern Siberia, occupies a picturesque little cottage embowered amid twining honey-suckles and fragrant blossoming lilacs at Sharon Hill. "Although it has been more than three years since George left us all here," said she, yesterday, "and went out on that ill-fated voyage, and although oceans of cruel waters and leagues of land have separated him from us, I have seen him twice within a year." Startling as this statement was, Mrs. Mellville was evidently in earnest. "On the 10th of last June," she continued, "I retired to my room late at night. Days of anxious waiting for some news of the Jeannette without bringing a ray of hope had almost caused me to despair of ever again seeing my husband. I had fallen into an uneasy sleep, from which one of the children aroused me. It was, perhaps more than an hour after this, and while I was wide awake, that I became conscious of a strange presence in my room, and you may well imagine with what mingled feelings of joy and fear I heard George's voice, and, looking up, saw him standing by the bedside. Saw him as plainly as I now see you. He was saying: 'Count the bells! Count the bells!' and, as he spoke, I distinctly heard the bells of a ship striking, two by two, the strokes of the hour. 'Count them,' continued my husband, and I said: 'Yes, George.' I remember that when the seventh stroke sounded I thought that if it was a ship's bell there could be but one more, and, as the last sound died away, my husband said: 'Eight bells; the Jeannette is lost!' and vanished from the room. At that moment the sitting-room clock struck the hour of 4, and it was the morning of the 11th of June. At that very hour on that very morning the Jeannette went down into the fathomless depths of the Arctic Ocean, and the ice floe closed over her grave. I am no Spiritualist," continued Mrs. Mellville, "nor do I believe in spirits. I do not attempt to explain what I have just told you, but it is, every word of it, true. I never expected after that to hear of the safety of the crew of the Jeannette. A few weeks after the occurrence which I have narrated, and at the same hour in the morning, I had arisen for the day, and was in the hall which you see there. Again I saw my husband, nay, I even felt his breath in my face. I was dreadfully startled, but had sufficient courage to call out: 'George, is that you?' when the figure disappeared as if swallowed up in the air."

"And did you never speak of this before?" said the astonished reporter.

"Frequently," said Mrs. Mellville; "frequently to our little household, and once to Mrs. De Long, the unfortunate wife of the poor commander of the Jeannette. Last summer, or in the early fall, I met her in Philadelphia. She was hopeful, even confident, of the ultimate return of her husband. I was cast down, and finally told her what I have just related to you. She was disposed to laugh at me, but I told her that I believed that the Jeannette had been lost on the 11th of June. Alas! for poor Mrs. De Long, my prophecy was too true. Here is a letter from her to my little girl on the very day the news came that Captain DeLong's dead body had been found."—Phil'a Record.

The World.

The number of languages spoken is 4064. The number of men is about equal to the number of women. The average of human life is 33 years. One quarter die before the age of 7, one-half before the age of 17. To every 1000 persons, 1 only reaches 100 years; and to every 100, only six reach 75 years; and not more than one in 500 will reach 80 years. There are on the earth 1,000,000,000 of inhabitants. Of these 33,333,333 die every year; 91,824 die every day; 3,805 die every hour; and 63 per minute or 1 every second. These losses are about balanced by an equal number of births. The married are longer lived than the single; and, above all, those who observe a sober and industrious conduct. Tall men liver longer than short ones. Women have more chances of life previous to the age of fifty years than men, but fewer after. The number of marriages are in the proportion of 76 to 100, and are more frequent after the equinoxes—that is during the months of June and December. Those born in Spring are generally more robust than others. Births and deaths are more frequent by night than by day. The number of men capable of bearing arms is about one-fourth of the population.

He Knew who she Was.

Two of the brokers were watching a lady who was sitting in the gallery yesterday, and wondering who she was, when they noticed another broker walk up and speak to her.

"Now I know who she is," said one of the brokers, "she is Jack's wife."

"How do you know?"

"Because he neither took off his hat nor shook hands when he spoke to her."

That settled it.

"Yes," said a fresh arrival from Bodie the other day, "the gal I married up on the lode last month is a perfect lady—a perfect lady, sir. I don't suppose I've heard her swear real hard more'n twice this Spring!"

Why Gwendolen is Desolate.

"Do you like pie?"

It was in summer that Gwendolen Mahaffy spoke these words to Ethelbert Quirkson as they sauntered back from the croquet ground to the house. Gwendolen had hit her corn instead of a croquet ball, and as the blow fell there came to her such a feeling of desolate loneliness, such a wistful yearning to howl and swear, that she had looked into Ethelbert's eye with her own dusky orbs and said, in the low, musical voice whose every tone thrilled Ethelbert with a sweet, rapturous, three-for-fifty cents thrill, that she really must go and help her dear mamma get supper—she loved so dearly to help in all household matters that mamma had often said that whoever got her for a wife would never need to hire a girl—and a merry laugh was trilled forth from between the wine-red lips that Ethelbert had so often made up his mind to kiss and then weakened when the time came. He bent tenderly and lovingly over her now, listening to every word she said and believing it all. Nothing could have shaken his faith in the girlish innocence of Gwendolen and he loved her with a passionate adoration that knew no bounds. To him she was perfection—Whatever she did was right and whatever she said was his gospel. It is even betting that he didn't know her front hair was a bang. Reared amid the solitudes of St. Louis and having only nature for a companion and teacher his child-like faith was not to be wondered at.

"Yes, Gwennie, dear," he said, "I am very fond of pie."

"And do you love me as much today as you did last Tuesday?" she asked, changing the subject in her impulsive, North-Side way.

"Better, far better, my darling," Ethelbert replied, in tones that were tremulous with tenderness. "My love for you shall never falter, never fade, but always be greater, stronger and more beautiful than before. Into that love I have woven the best efforts of my life, and she to whom it is devoted shall ever be the shrine at which my soul shall worship." Unfortunately there was nobody with a club in the immediate vicinity.

"I can make pies,' said Gwendolen, smiling archly as she spoke.

"Can you, darling?"—this in low, earnest tones.

"Why of course," responded the girl.

"Then," said Ethelbert, calmly, but firmly "don't do it. Somebody that you like might accidentally eat one of them."

Ethelbert has now a second-hand engagement ring for sale cheap.

The Highest Types.

You say you demand the noblest of womanhood in your wife. If that is the sort of woman you want, marry Nora Mulligan, your laundress' daughter. She wears cowhide shoes, is guiltless of corsets, never had a sick day in her life, takes in washing, goes out house-cleaning, and cooks for a family of seven children, her mother and three section men, boarding with her. I don't think she would marry you, because Con Regan, the track walker, is her style of a man. Let us just examine into your qualifications as a model husband after your own matrimonial ideas, my boy. Can you shoulder a barrel of flour and carry it down to the cellar? Can you saw and split ten cords of hickory wood in the fall so as to have ready fuel all winter? Can you spade up half an acre of ground for a kitchen garden? Do you know what will take the limy taste out of the new cistern, and can you patch the little leak in the kitchen roof? Can you bring home a pane of glass and a wad of putty to repair damages in the sitting room window? Can you do anything about the house that Con Regan can? My dear boy, you see why Nora Mulligan will have none of you; she wants a higher type of true manhood. You expect to hire men to do all men's work about the house, but you wan't your wife to do everything any woman can do. Believe me, my dear son, nine-tenths of the girls who play the piano and sing so charmingly, whom you in your limited knowledge set down as 'mere butterflies of fashion,' are better fitted for wives than you are for a husband. If you want to marry a first-class cook and experienced housekeeper, do your courting in the intelligence office. But if you want a wife, marry the girl you love, with dimpled hands and a face like the sunlight, and her love will teach her all these things, my boy, long before you have learned one-half of your own lessons."—Burlington Hawkeye.

A Main street hatter who recently added a dog to his pets left him in his shop Sunday to guard his goods. The position proving rather monotonous to the "purp," he looked about for business, and began to open hat boxes and exhibit goods. His style of bringing them to the front proved too expensive to warrant his continuance as a clerk. The dog would pull a hat out, throw it into the air, tear off the band, then standing on the end of the brim with the air of a "la de da" boy, would bite out the crown. Then he repeated the performance. When the proprietor of the store called the dog off, the floor looked like a junk shop. Several times, when annoyed by the friends of the hatter, the animal made a rush for the front and threatened to come out through the plate glass window. He will not be left again until he gets a better idea of his duties.—Norwich Bulletin.

"Why did God forbid Adam and Eve to eat of the forbidden fruit?" asked an Austin Sunday school teacher of his class. "For fear they might fall out of the tree and hurt themselves," replied Jimmie Fizzletop, who had his arm in a sling.

Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1881.

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the king of medicines.

JOHN K. ALLENDER.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is composed of Iron in soluble form; Cinchona the great tonic, together with other standard remedies, making a remarkable non-alcoholic tonic, which will cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Malaria, Weakness, and relieve all Lung and Kidney diseases.

DOWNS' ELIXIR.
N. H. DOWNS'
Vegetable Balsamic
ELIXIR

This valuable medicine is purely vegetable: the discovery of which was the result of many years' close study, in order to discover the cause, the symptoms, and the cure—viz:

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of oppression of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—Consumption, at its commencement, is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is more observable, but rather dry; then becomes local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

CONSUMPTION

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, generally destroys the hectic before the cough is entirely gone. Consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions for cure of pulmonary diseases.

Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.

LATEST TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

Rescued.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—A dispatch from Virginia City, dated last night, says: Six men penetrated the Alta drift to night with refreshments for the imprisoned miners. All wore ice helmets to enable them to pass the belt of 300 feet of foul air between the entrance and the end of the drift. The men were found in comparatively good condition. They had turned water from the drift into their ice water key when empty, twisted the end of the compressed air pipe into a barrel of water and, standing around it, breathed the air thus cooled as it passed through the water. About midnight all were removed from the drift, the whistles along the lake signaling the event. The bodies of Bennett and Callahan, the brave fellows who perished in the attempt to rescue the miners by means of a boat, have been recovered.

The Largest in the Field.

WARREN, June 3.—The Cadwallader well, which struck the oil-bearing sand yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, has turned out to be the largest of any yet found in the Warren field. It is located on lot 635 and is a few rods distant from the famous "646" mystery. While less than three feet in the sand it commenced flowing at the rate of 1,500 barrels a day. During the first nineteen hours it put 1,250 barrels of oil into a tank by actual measurement. This record, it is thought, will be far eclipsed when the well is finished. The Murphy well, on lot 619, is flowing at least nine hundred barrels. The tanks are full of oil and running over.

Great quantities of petroleum are running to waste for lack of trunkage, The Mahoopany and another well are now shut down on top of the sand. The greatest excitement prevails and hundreds of people are flocking to the new wells.

Consul General to Egypt.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Simon Wolf, consul general to Egypt, has resigned, and George P. Pomeroy, brother-in-law of Edwin Cowles, of the Cleveland Leader, is to be his successor. The name will be sent to the senate to-morrow.

Colonel James F. Milliken, of Hollidaysburg, Pa., who has been in Egypt for the past five years, has been here for two weeks working up his chances for the place. He had the support of Cameron and the ultra stalwart members of congress, but he came too late. Wilson, the editor of the Harrisburg Telegraph, came over day before yesterday to give the Milliken boom a send-off, but found that Pomeroy had preempted the title, and that was the end of the matter. Milliken is still here and blames himself for his defeat.

Ladies' Land League.

CLEVELAND, Ohio., June 2.—Bishop Gilmour has written a letter to be read in all Catholic churches of this diocese at mass next Sunday excommunicating any Catholic lady who shall hereafter attend any meeting of the ladies branch of the land league or become a member thereof. The bishop denounces that branch as calculated to make brawling politicians of women, and declares that membership therein is incompatible with womanly modesty.

Hod Carriers Stop Work.

HARRISBURG, June 2.—The hod carriers and building laborers of this city inaugurated a general strike today for an advance of twenty-five cents per day. Building improvements have come to a standstill in consequence. The strikers have been receiving $1.75 per day. The contractors recently granted an advance to the bricklayers, and upon this action the present strikers also demanded increased pay.

The Big Strike.

PITTSBURG, June 1.—Graff, Bennett & Co., shut down yesterday afternoon at the Fort Pitt, Millvale, and Southside mills, throwing about 2,000 men out of employment. Other mills shutting down last night are Olliver Bros. & Phillips, both the upper and lower mills, employing 3,800 men, whose salaries aggregate about $25,000 per month: Wm. Clark & Co., 4,000 men; J. W. Painter & Sons, 850 men; J. W. Friend & Co., (Wood's mill), 400 men; Brown & Co., 530 men; Zig & Co., 500 men; Wilson, Walker & Co., 550 men, Shoenberger & Co., 700 men; Groff & Woods, 450 men; Superior iron works, 250 men; Lindsay, McCutcheon & Co., 300 men; National rolling mill No. 3 (the old Wharton mill), 200 men; Keystone mill, 400 men It is believed that Dilworth, Porter & Co., will also shut down, but members of the firm were non-committal. Woods & Co., will run on as usual, not being a union mill, and it is understood that the same is true of Park Bro.'s & Co., of the Black Diamond steel works, and Miller, Matcalf & Parken Moorhead Bros & Co.'s works at Sharpsburg, employing 265 men, have stopped work. The National tube works company, at McKeesport, has not said what will be done, but it is believed they will refuse to sign the scale.

Up to 1 o'clock this afternoon there was no information at Amalgamated headquarters of any iron firm in this district having signed, except Carnagie, Brothers & Co., limited, who signed yesterday for their Union iron mills. These mills are located in the Fifteenth ward and have thirty-one puddling furnaces and seven trains of rolls. The product, thirty-five thousand tons a year, consists of beams, channels, angles, tees, plates, bar and guide iron. Its coming into the agreement thus promptly is regarded by workmen as a break of importance and confirms them in the belief that as soon as badly needed repairs are completed, signing the scale will become so common as to lose novelty. With the exception of last year it is many years since a single signature was down before the 1st of June. Last year the agreement was made between conference committees representing the mill owners and the Amalgamated association. An officer of the Elba iron and bolt company, limited, desires to state that the assertion that the company had signed or would sign the scale is without foundation. He said: 'Our puddling furnaces stopped to-day, but some parts of the finishing department are running. We have repairs to make, which will require two weeks, and begun on them to-day.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 1.—There is no change in the situation from what was anticipated last night. The mills are all shut down, though the furnaces as a rule have not as yet gone out of blast. Everything is quiet and orderly. The opinion seems to be that the strike may be ong, as neither side shows any sign of yielding.

CINCINNATI, O., June 1.—Except one rolling mill, which works scrap iron exclusively, and two mills which are working up three or four days' accumulation of blooms, all the mills in Cincinnati and vicinity have stopped. It is the belief of the mill owners that all mills willl resume next Monday, and a complete adjustment will be made.

ST. LOUIS, June 1.—The Laclede rolling mill, the Helmbacker forge and the Harrison wire works shut down last night, and probably will not start up again until the question of wages is definitely settled. There is no disturbance, though about 1,200 men had quit work. Representatives of the manufacturers are here and the men are in consulation with them. The impression is that they will be ordered to go to work on Jarrett's arrival.

CHICAGO, June 1.—The men at the Irondale mills are all out on a strike. A dispatch has just been received from Mr. Jarrett, president of the Amalgamated association of iron wokers, stating that he will be here to-day. It is thought the question whether they will continue or not, will be settled upon his arrival.

Alta Mine Disaster.

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev., June 2.—Early this morning Richard Bennett and Dennis Calahan boarded a small hunting skiff and ventured into the Alta drift in search of the imprisoned miners and neither have since been heard of. It is feared that both have been suffocated by heat and gas. Shortly afterward a German, known as "Dutch George," tried to wade into the shaft but soon returned, delirious. He subsequently stated that he saw a light and a boat but no men. Two other men attempted to wade in, but found the heat and gas insufferable and returned after going a short distance. It is reported that raps are still heard on the air pipe, indicating that the imprisoned miners are yet alive.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 2.—A dispatch from Virginia City says a man wearing a helmet penetrated to the end of the Alta drift. He found seven men uninjured sitting in the cooling-off house. The only lives lost were a boat this morning.

A Sad Accident.

TROY, N. Y., June 2.—Two children of James McDonald found a railroad torpedo in the yard of their parents' residence this afternoon and striking it with an ax it exploded. One side of the head of the youngest child was blown away and the other child suffered a fracture of the skull. One is dying and the other may not recover.

Dies of Small-pox.

ALTOONA, June 3.—Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Henry Milton received a telegram from Chicago which conveys the dreadful tidings that her husband had died from small-pox the night previous. The information was sent by Dr. Oscar C. DeWolf, commissioner of health. Mr. Henry Milton was a boiler maker by trade and worked in the railroad shops in this city until about two months ago, when he went to Chicago to work in the shops of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad. He was stricken down with small-pox, and was admitted to the hospital conducted by the Sisters of Mercy, May 20. Through the kindness of the city and hospital authorities and Mr. Milton's shop friends his family in this city had been in receipt of daily telegrams informing them of his condition, and in consequence were not altogether unprepared for this last sad message. The remains were buried in a Catholic cemetery in Chicago in accordance with instructions sent. The deceased was about 40 years of age. His wife and seven little children reside on Seventh avenue between Third and Fourth streets. Mrs. Milton is a sister of Mr. John Lee, of the company's tin shop and also Mr. Peter Lee, telegraph operator.

Observations of a Rambler.

BELLEFONTE, June 5, 1882.

MR. EDITOR: The writer left Bellefonte on Monday, May 29, for a brief trip to Mount Eagle, Canada, Howard, Eagleville and Longsville, on business and pleasure bent.

The first place where I had occasion to stop was at the establishment of Leathers Brothers, cigar manufacturers. The members of this firm are energetic business men and there is every indication that their business will prove remunerative.

Mrs. Reader, a soldier's widow, is erecting a new residence at Mount Eagle.

A short distance below Mount Eagle I stopped to get a drink from the splendid spring on the premises of Mr. Christian Bowers. A stone is set in the wall of the building erected around the spring on which is inscribed "C. Bower, 1810," it being 72 years old. Mr. Christian Bower, the owner, was only three years old when the building was erected. He is now in feeble health.

Samuel, a son of Mr. Christian Bower, is engaged in pealing bark, having a goodly number of men in his employ. He also has a big log job that will keep him busy this winter.

Mr. James Turner, of near Mount Eagle, has a fine barn in process of erection. He is a clever gentleman and a good citizen.

I met an old playmate in the person of Mr. Fred Bower, living just below Mount Eagle. Accepting an invitation to call in and see him, I was introduced to a stranger, who, by the way, is a young son aged about six months. He is a bright boy and Fred has refused a million dollars for him.

From this place I journeyed to Howard, putting up for the night at Mr. J. Cook's hotel. He keeps a first-class house, with a well-spread table and good beds. Excellent order prevails and he seems to understand the management of all classes of guests.

While in Howard I noticed that Mr. Robert Cook is erecting a fine residence and that a new enterprise in the shape of a general merchandise store has been started by N. L. Schenck & Co. Mr. H. C. Holter, a first-class carpenter, has, we are informed, the contract for erecting several buildings.

The next morning, May 30, being Decoration day, every person in Howard was preparing for the ceremonies. It was the first time that Decoration day was ever observed in Howard. Austin Curtin, Esq., was Captain of the procession. Captain Benison, of Jacksonville; D. W. Schenk, of Howard; William Leathers, of Mount Eagle and David Kennedy, of this place, were present. There were also others whose names escape my memory. The oration was delivered by our townsman, D. H. Hastings, Esq. He made a good impression. His remarks were calculated to disabuse the prejudices against Decoration day existing in the minds of some, citing the examples afforded by history where nations, thousands of years ago, honored the memories of departed heroes.

Dr. Hensyl, of Howard, is a popular physician, his practice extending into Clinton county as far as Lock Haven. He has enrolled on his memorandum as high as fifty patients who require constant attention. If his practice continues in the future as it is at present he will surely imperil his health.

On Wednesday morning I bade Howard farewell and soon reached Eagleville, stopping for dinner with Mr. David Bechtol, who, with his brother, is engaged in farming. Both of these gentlemen are unmarried, but the indications are that they will not continue long in this state of "single blessedness." I shall not tell any more about it, however. They are ditching their meadow land and are among the No. 1 farmers of that section.

I arrived at Eagleville in the evening, putting up at Delong's hotel. The town was quite lively. The lumbermen were just finishing their drive down Beach Creek and its branches. Mr. Delong kept excellent order in his hotel while this crowd of men were in town, keeping his bar closed most of the time.

While in Eagleville I met Mr. John C. Bechtol, who is clerking in Mr. Irvin Kunes' store. Mr. B. formerly farmed on Marsh Creek, but has rented his farm and cast his lot among the money changers. Mr. Frank Kunes is a clerk in the same store.

Mr. James Quigley, of Eagleville has a fine store and is doing a good business.

The next morning, Thursday, June 1, I started up Marsh Creek, which was an exceedingly rough and muddy road, a large part of it being in good condition for floating logs. I continued on my way until I arrived at the journey, wending my way up Marsh Creek. I looked intently about for Delong and his party, who went in search of the North Pole, thinking I could find them in this dismal region. Future Polar expeditions should try this route with more success than has yet rewarded their efforts.

Among those whom I met was Mr. John T. Lucas, a farmer, who was so unfortunate as to lose his right arm in a threshing machine soon after the close of the late war, the accident occurring while he was employed by John P. Dehass.

I then started to Longville, traveling over mountains and hills. I came to a place where I saw a man engaged in working on the road. Driving on a short distance, I noticed a building that might have been Noah's ark. I questioned the man working on the road as to what this strange building might be and what designation to give to the locality. "You are in Longville," he answered, "and the building, when completed, will be a picture gallery." I soon discovered that I was conversing with Mr. John Long, postmaster, justice of the peace, and photographer of Longville.

There should be a post office by all means in the centre of Curtin township, or one at each end of it, as it is from 9 to 12 miles from the lower end, the post office at Longville being further from those residing at the lower end of Curtin township than Howard post office and the road less mountainous.

I arrived in Bellefonte Friday evening, being tired in body and glad to see the beautiful town.

TRAVELER.

—Harry Teats & Co., grocers, had an immense trade on Saturday last, the largest the store has yet experienced, consequently, the proprietors are elated.

Small-pox at Houtzdale.

We have every reason to believe that the burgess and council of Houtzdale are making a vigorous effort to curtail the small pox so far as is in their power to do so, as the business of the town is suffering by the diversion of trade and country produce to other points, many of the country people being unwilling to expose themselves to the disease by going to Houtzdale. As the number of cases in the borough proper has been comparatively small, the town authorities would hardly be expected to confess to the existence of more small pox than they have under their control. For them in their trying situation all due charity should be exercised. Meanwhile a good deal of caution should be exercised by those whose business compels them to go to Houtzdale as the disease evidently exists in that vicinity to a considerable extent. It is to be feared in view of what has been above stated that in the absence of competent authority to apply sanitary measures the disease will continue to exist all summer with the continued risk of spreading to other localities.

A Jumbo of the Deep.

Boston was excited one day recently. A huge whale which was caught at Provincetown last April and has since been undergoing a process of embalming, was exhibited in that city and will soon start on a tour of the United States and Canada. It is sixty-two feet in length and its estimated weight when captured was fifty-two tons. It is the largest whale that has ever been captured and the success met with in embalming the aquatic monster is considered marvelous. Three thousand two hundred pounds of arsenic, twenty barrels of plaster, eighty barrels of sawdust and several thousand pounds of other material of a chemical and preservative nature were employed in the operation. When this monster is taken for exhibition through the country he will attract much attention—even more than Barnum's Jumbo. If it should be brought to Centre county the crowds that will throng to see it will be equal to the immense numbers who flock to Sechler's grocery store. But they wont gain half so much for their pains, for a view of the great whale will afford only a momentary gratification, while the groceries that may be purchased of Sechler will delight and please everybody. We urge our readers who are in need of anything in the grocery line to visit Sechler, and they will secure what they want in any quantity and the best quality.

—One of the large tanks at the Altoona gas works careened on Friday allowing all the gas to escape. The accident is said to have been occasioned by the recent heavy falls of rain, which filled the basin, making the tank float to the top. The Tribune, however, promises to furnish enough gas for the people of the Railroad city until the difficulty is remedied.

Sudden Death of Mrs. Claude Cook.

The many friends of Mrs. Claude Cook will be shocked at the announcement of her death which occurred at the home of her husband in Snow Shoe last Saturday morning. She was seized with illness at about 7 o'clock, before which hour she had enjoyed her usual excellent health, with the exception of a severe pain in her head. She died in convulsions. She was about 35 years of age and was an estimable lady. Her husband and friends have our sincere sympathy.

—The Williamsport Sun and Banner seems to be laboring under the impression that the Presbyterian church edifice in this place is a new structure. Our Lumber City contemporary is informed that it was erected about twelve years ago and the enterprising congregation will soon be building another to eclipse any similar building in Williamsport.

—Harry Teats is one of the best grocers in this vicinity, and the prophesies that his store would attract a large patronage are being abundantly realized.

—A. E. Canfield and I. P. McCreary, members of the class of '82 of State College, have written a capital letter to the Pittsburg Dispatch relative to the affairs of the College under the regime of the late President of that institution. It handles some of the testimony given before the investigating committee in a very severe manner.

He Found the Place.

A promising and enterprising young man in the vicinity of Bellefonte being about to propose to — his — affiancee, was greatly embarassed on account of his clothes. Knowing that she was an admirer of a perfect fitting suit, which would show his well built form to advantage, he resolved to win her or die. So he started out to find a perfect fitting suit which he knew would win her. He searched every store, high and low, but to no avail—he could not be suited. His heart began to sink within him, when he was advised to go to the Boston Clothing House, just opened in Reynolds' Block, opposite the Brockerhoff House, Allegheny street, Bellefonte, Pa. He went there at once, and had no trouble in finding a good fit which elated him so much that he at once started for his affianced to whom he proposed and was accepted. The sleeve of the new coat stole gently around her beautiful waist, the match was consummated the following Sunday, when "two hearts beat as one."

—Is not the duel gaining a foot-hold in this country? In nearly every newspaper there are reports of affairs of honor of this kind between prominent men, the latest participants being two military men in New York, all about a supposed slight of one by the other on Decoration day. Nothing but blood will satisfy them. It is true that most of these meetings prove harmless, but the fact that so many men are sending challenges to each other is evidence that they approve of that method of settling difficulties. Perhaps some will think that this is a good way from the fact that persons who will engage in a duel are not fit to live anyway, and it is quite proper for them to blow their brains (?) out. But we hope that our friends in Centre county will not follow this absurd custom, as dead men cannot eat, and the man that gets killed will be deprived of the privilege of purchasing groceries at Sechler's store. But we do not believe that any body who buys groceries of Sechler will blow another's brains out or desire his own stock of that article to be treated in a similar way, because he naturally wants to live. People live by eating, and unless superior groceries can be procured living becomes a burden. But it should be a pleasure to the people of this town and county to know that they have free access to Sechler's store at all times during business hours, can procure the best groceries in the world and sleep, eat and drink in happiness and contentment.

What shall we do with our Boys and Girls?

Evidently the first step in family education is to make the boys and girls fit to do something, the next to find them something to do.

Sound mind, sound morals, sound body are not accidents, nor are they entirely providential gifts definitely bestowed at the beginning of a career—they are the products of training.

A work that practically meets the great questions uppermost in every family, has just been issued from the press of J. C. McCurdy & Co., (Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis,) entitled "practical life."

Self-training, home-training and the steps of this training are laid open clearly in this valuable book.

The various avenues to success in life, the multiplied ways of reaching honest competence are delightfully portrayed. The book abounds in hints how to make money, and how to keep money—hints that are revelations.

It may be confidently said, that this volume in a family would be a nucleus about which would crystalize usefulness, thrift, economy, money getting, until, in every instance, it would have assured a hundred times its worth.

If this book were studied, and lived up to, the next generation would not possess a pauper or an idler.

The publisher want canvassers everywhere to introduce this valuable work, to whom they offer good pay.

THE LATEST NEWS.

The Graves at Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., May 30.—The weather here to-day was all that could be desired for the ceebration of Decoration day, and a large concourse of people was attracted to witness the decoration of the graves of the soldiers interred in the national cemetery. The town was gaily decorated and bands of music were constantly passing along the streets. The procession was formed at 2 p. m., and proceeded to the cemetery after the usual ceremonies of the Grand Army. The flowers were strewn by little children over the resting-places of the sleeping heroes. Then after prayer Hon. Joseph R. Hawley delivered an oration. In response to repeated cails Ex-Secretary Blaine appeared and briefly addressed the vast assemblage. After the singing of the hymn 'America, in which the audience joined, the exercises concluded with benediction. A reception was tendered ex-Secretary Blaine and General Hawley this evening.

Egypt.

LONDON, May 30.—A Cairo dispatch to the Standard says: The military party are greatly incensed at the terms of the Khedive's communique reinstating Arabi Pasha as minister of war. They consider themselves insulted by the passage stating Arabi Pasha was only reinstated to preserve peace, which the military otherwise would have broken. A deputation of officers visited Arabi Pasha and demanded as a reparation for the insult the instant deposition of the khedive. They stated they had their men well in hand and ready at a moment's notice to march on the khedive's palace. Arabi Pasha succeeded in calming them, and stated that he and the khedive had agreed to leave the settlement of all pending questions to the decision of the sultan.

The Badly Treated Americans.

CITY OF MEXICO, May 30.—The allegations of the Shields and Pittsburgh glass blowers whose treatment by a Mexican official has been made the subject of congressional action at Washington, are found on investigation false in so far as they refer to United States Minister Morgan, the case not being recognized by the Mexican government as admitting of diplomatic intervention. Minister Morgan acting unofficially hastened the release of the men and the expenses of their return home have been paid by the American benevolent society at the earnest request of Morgan. Their letter exonerating Morgan from the charges previously made was voluntarily written in the presence of a responsible witness.

Another Victory.

HONG KONG, May 30.—The French expedition against Hanoi, capital of You Quinn, reached the point of attack about April 23, and captured the citadel on April 26. Few authentic particulars have been received. French correspondents report that Hanoi was defeated by 7,000 Anamese and Chinese troops with strong fortifications, abundant artillery, etc. The French, it is said, to the number of only a few hundred, carried the place after three hours bombardment, meeting with a desperate hand to hand resistance in the final assaults. The French losses are declared to have been only a few men wounded, while there was frightful carnage among the natives.

Negro Lynched.

CHICAGO, May 30.—A Little Rock special says: 'A negro boy, named Jim Sanders, guilty of an unsuccessful attempt to violate the person of Miss Mamie Kerr, a young white girl, ten miles south of this place, was arrested here on Sunday, taken to the scene of his crime and lodged in the calaboose. About midnight a number of masked men broke down the door and riddled Sanders with bullets. The colored people are greatly excited and incensed, and many predict further trouble.'

The Hostiles.

CHARLESTOWN, May 30.—It is reported that seventy-five hostile Indians passed the Custom House, on the 27th, pursued by Mexican troops. Fifteen Indians were seen yesterday morning making, apparently, for the Huachica mountains, with the Mexicans following closely. The balance of the hostiles are supposed to be in the vicinity of the Custom House. Two companies of infantry and Indian scouts left Huachica yesterday afternoon to go in pursuit.

Liberalism in Spain.

MADRID, May 30.—The ministerial journals state that the leading liberals and democrats have informed Premier Sagasta that they will insist upon the abolition of parliament oaths and of personal allegiance this session.

President Arthur.

BABYLON, L. I., May 30.—President Arthur arrived here Sunday evening, and remained until last night. He was the guest of Austin Corbin.

Jackson Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—In the senate executive session to-day the nomination of Jackson, as internal revenue collector for the Allegheny, Pa., district, was the subject of a speech of some length by Senator Mitchell. He opposed the confirmation on the ground that it would involve a violation of the civil service principles by removing a faithful officer whose retention was urged by 8,000 representative citizens of the district and by all three of the members of congress from the collection district. He further said that in his and in their opinion the nomination had been made merely for partisan purposes. Senator Cameron, of Pa., briefly replied to the effect that Collector Sullivan had held the office for twelve years; that his last term has expired; that the president had a perfect right to exercise his constitutional prerogative of making a new appointment and that the nominee was in all respect a competent and suitable man. The confirmation then followed without any division.

Indians.

CHICAGO, May 31.—A St. Paul special says: Scouts just in from Milk river report that Chief Big Bear is preparing to cross the border early in June with 500 lodges, to hunt in United States territory. He announces that, if let alone, he would harm nobody, but if attacked, would fight to the last. This is the same band that encamped at the half breed settlements on Milk river last winter and captured Sheriff Healy and party, but released them and fled when the troops hurried toward them from Fort Assiniboine. Straggling Indians have been passing the line for some time. Major Iges, who is a very able Indian fighter, will probably operate against them.

Egypt.

LONDON, May 31.—A Berlin correspondent of the Times had a conversation regarding Egypt with a person of distinction whose close relations to the highest officials justify a semi-official interpretation of his statements. According to this authority there is reason to believe that Germany would support an invitation to Italy to supply troops to restore order in Egypt. That what Germany supports Austria will sanction, and Russia would certainly prefer Italy's acting at the mandate of Europe to the English occupation.

Instant Death.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 31.—Saturday, in Lafayette county, on the Louisiana border, a negro named Wade Beed was reprimanded by Mrs. Reeves for passing through her yard and leaving the fence and gate down. He left but returned soon after with a gun, evidently looking for the lady, but not finding her he found Mr. Reeves and fired both barrels, riddling Mr. Reeves' body with shot and producing instant death.

A Situation for Life.

ST. LOUIS, May 31.—A Springfield, Mo., dispatch says; 'The trial of Taylor Underwood for the murder of City Marshal J. P. McElrath, at Greenfield, terminated last night, the jury returning a verdict of assassination, the punishment of which is ninety-nine years in the penitentiary. Underwood was tried once before, found guilty and sentenced to be hanged, but on an appeal he got a rehearing, which resulted as above."

The Situation in Cairo.

LONDON, May 31.—A Cairo special says: The natives are escaping from Cairo to avoid signing the petition, for the reinstatement of the ministry, the withdrawal of the ultimatum, the departure of the squadrons, the recall of the consuls general and the deposition of the khedive. No time must be lost to employ measures for saving the life of the khedive.

Heavy Forest Fires.

CHICAGO, May 31.—An East Tawas, Mich., special says: There are heavy forest fires back of here. The air is filled with smoke and cinders. Much difficulty is experienced in saving farm buildings. Unless rain comes soon great damage will ensue in June.

Russian Affairs.

LONDON, May 31.—Giers, the Russian foreign secretary, informed Sir Edward Thornton that Russia, acting in concert with Germany, Austria and Italy, had instructed their representative at Constantinople to support the policy pursued by England and France.

A Murderer Confesses.

PITTSTON, Pa., May 31.—Stephen Vanbour, a native of Bavaria, who murdered a schoolmate about a year ago and fled to this country, was arrested here to-day. He confessed the crime.

Fire at Lancaster.

LANCASTER, Pa., May 31.—The millinery store of Gollschalk & Lederman was damaged by fire and water to the amount of $30,000; insurance, $25,000.

A $60,000 Fire.

PUTNAM, Conn., May 31.—The Bugbee block was burned this morning and the adjoining buildings badly damaged. Loss, $50,000; partly insured.

More Vessels Ordered Out.

LONDON, May 31.—It is stated that the French have ordered additional vessels from Toulon and Tunis to Alexandria.

Why He Wasn't Worried.

A story is told of Mr. Simon Wolff, the American Consul General at Cairo, Egypt. He reached Cairo about the time of the great revolt. He was sitting in front of Shepherd's Hotel taking his after-dinner coffee, when and excited Englishman rushed up to him, and cried: "Have you heard the news, Mr. Consul? There is to be a general rising to-night, and every European and Christian in the city is to be murdered!" Mr. Wolff went on drinking his coffee, apparently unmoved by these dreadful tidings. "Do you not hear me?" reiterated, his agitated informant. "The fanatics intend to-night to kill every European and Christian in Cairo." "Yes, I hear you," quietly responded Mr. Wolff, "but I do not see how that affects me at all, since I am an American and an Israelite.

Delicate Females.

The exactions of society, added to the cares of maternity and the household, have tested beyond endurance the frail constitutions which have been granted the majority of women. To combat this tendency to premature decline, no remedy in the world possesses the nourishing and strengthening properties of Malt Bitters. They enrich the blood, perfect digestion, stimulate the liver and kidneys, arrest ulcerative weaknesses, and purify and vitalize every function of the female system.

A growler's luck: "This is just my luck," said the gloomy man at the theatre. "Here's performance going that's so bad it's agonizing to witness, and its the first time in six months that I haven't had a women with a bath-tub hat in front of me when I've been to the treatre."

In good old days long gone: Old lady (apropos of wiry and ancient leg of mutton)—"D'ye mean to say that this is lamb?" Butcher—"Cert'n'ly, mum!" Old lady—"Maybe it was, once; you and I was lambs about the same time."

50 cents is a very small amount. It will neither buy house and lot, nor will it set a man up in business, but if a sufferer with piles will invest this amount in Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, he can cure himself of one of the most distressing diseases to which the human system is heir.

A city chap who had escorted a country girl to the theatre, thinking to please her went out and bought some apples. When he had put them in her lap she spoke out loud enough to be heard all about: "What do you take me for—a cider mill?" City chap collapsed; he couldn't stand the press.

All the same: A good old lady speaking in prayer meeting and giving expression to the joy and confidence she felt, said: "I feel as if I was ready, this minute, to fall into the arms of Beelzebub." "Abraham! You mean Abraham!" hastily corrected a brother sitting near. "Well, Abraham, then," was the reponse, "it don't make any difference. They're both good men."

On account of the sudden changes in the temperature at this season and in this climate, it is almost impossible to keep free from colds and coughs; but a prompt use of N. H. TESTED AND FOUND WORTHY.

In order to bring more fully before the notice of the people the value of a true and tried remedy, we give the following reliable testimonial from one of the many who have been cured, and whose reputation for veracity cannot be questioned.

WOODBURY, N. J., March 20, 1882.
SWEDISH BITTERS CO.:
GENTLEMEN.—I have suffered with dyspepsia and its horrible effects for many years. Have spent hundreds of dollars with physicians and in patent medicines, with no avail. I have been unable to eat meats of any kind, and could not retain water on my stomach, and was unable to sleep at night. I was induced to procure and try a bottle of your Swedish Bitters, and can conscientiously say that its use was followed by beneficial results. I can now sit down and enjoy a hearty meal of meats and vegetables of any kind and have gained sixteen pounds in three weeks and can cordially recommend it to others.
Yours respectfully,

DECORATING THE GRAVES.

How Decoration Day was Observed in Bellefonte—Parade and Address.

Tuesday was a beautiful day, and we feel inclined to forgive fickle Spring for her backwardness in other respects because she was so kind as to temper the atmosphere with gentle mildness and make the sun shine brightly throughout Decoration day, which has come to be regarded as one of the most important days of the year.

The observance in Bellefonte was simple. In the morning the committee on floral decorations visited the old and new Catholic cemeteries and the Friends' graveyard, where the graves of the soldier dead were appropriately decorated.

About 4 o'clock p. m. the procession formed in the Diamond in the following order: Pleasant Gap band; Company B, 5th Regiment, N. G.; Gregg Post, No. 95, G. A. R.; Councils of Junior Order U. A. M., of Altoona and Bellefonte; Logan Hose Company; Undine Fire Company; Boys' Branch Y. M. C. A. The line of parade was the same as that outlined in the published order of Post Commander Amos Mullen, Major George Harris commanding. The men marched finely, their uniform and regalia presented a bright appearance and everybody voted it one of the best parades which Bellefonte has witnessed for a long time.

Arriving at the Union cemetery, the line of parade formed in a hollow square around a superb central cross of flowers. The services in the cemetery consisted of the regular ritual of the Post used on such occasions. The first address was read by Dr. George Harris as commander; then followed a prayer by Rev. DeLong and a dirge by the band. Four graves were decorated, the first by Mr. D. S. Keller, the second by Mr. Roland Irvin, the third by J. B. Linn, Esq., and the last by Mr. James Rankin, who placed the white wreath on the grave by virtue of his office of chaplain of Gregg Post.

After separating to decorate the graves in various parts of the cemetery, the ranks were again formed and a very able address pronounced by J. B. Linn, Esq. It would afford us much pleasure to publish this address did space permit. It is spoken of as the most admirable deliverance ever made on a similar occasion in this place. It was read in clear, distinct tones that were plainly audible at a great distance from the orator. The language was appropriate and beautiful and the sentiment of an elevating character. In fact, Mr. Linn, always able and interesting and having an established reputation as an instructive speaker, excelled himself on this occasion.

THE DAY IN OTHER PLACES.

From various sources we have picked up the following items in regard to the exercises which took place throughout the county on Decoration day:

Our handsome townsman, Col. D. H. Hastings, was the orator of the day at Hublersburg and also at Howard, making brilliant speeches at both places.

At Hublersburg the services took place at an early hour. An excellent choir was in attendance to render appropriate music. After the solemn and impressive, but necessarily somewhat fatiguing work of decorating the graves was over, Mr. John Miller, a prominent citizen of that vicinity, invited the assembly to adjourn to a neighboring wood to partake of an elegant picnic dinner which had been prepared. They did not hesitate to accept the invitation and found the feast much more elaborate than had been expected. Our informant was too intent upon eating to recollect all the bill-of-fare, but remembers distinctly that there were about forty large rhubarb pies, and other delicious things in large quantity. To Mr. Walters, who always takes a great interest in such patriotic displays and observances, is largely due the success of the exercises at Hublersburg.

The commemorative exercises did not take place at Howard until 6 o'clock p. m., at which hour at least 300 people assembled to witness and assist in the duties of the day. Here also a large choir discoursed music. All the musical talent of the vicinity seemed to be called into requisition to do honor to the occasion. A drum corps from Beach Creek was also present. Captain Austin Curtin and Comrade David Kennedy were present to assist in carrying out the exercises. The Sunday school children here, as elsewhere, took prominent part in strewing the flowers.

At Boalsburg the day was duly observed, the exercises taking place at 6 o'clock p. m.

At Snydertown there was also a very appropriate observance of the day, Rev. Samuel E. Furst, of this place, addressing the people on the impressive topics which the recurrence of the day brings prominently to mind.

Captain Austin Curtin and Comrade David Kennedy, of this place, were at Jacksonville, where imposing services were held, the details of which we have not been able to obtain.

We understand that the observances at Pleasant Gap were not so extensive as usual, although the day was not allowed to pass without some recognition.

Child Torn by Dogs in Milesburg.

One day recently, Edith, the little eight-year-old daughter of Mr. C. H. Else, of Milesburg, was returning home from her uncle's house when she met a large dog and two smaller ones at the gate leading into the yard. These dogs are owned by Mr. Wm. B. Miles, of Milesburg. As the dogs knew the child well she thought she could pass them and enter the gate. This she tried to do, when the large dog sprang upon her knocking her down, and was followed by the two smaller ones, yelling and barking and tearing her clothing. The terrified child struggled to her feet, when the large dog again sprang upon her knocking her down and inflicting a wound two or three inches long on her left thigh. Once more she struggled to her feet, only to be knocked down again, this time being bitten in her side, which would have been much worse but for the thickness of her clothing. The fourth time she managed to get from under the enraged animals and ran toward the gate, when the large dog sprang at her biting her hand.

At this juncture, Mrs Else, who had witnessed the terrifying scene and was hastening to the aid of her child, opened the gate, when the dogs all turned on her; but as she reached one hand to help Edith, with the other she picked up a stone, and flinging it backward as she hurried in, struck one of the smaller dogs, and its yelp temporarily attracted the attention of the others. When the furious animals again turned to the attack, she and Edith were safely inside the gate.

Fortunately, Mrs. Else was in the garden, not far off, when the dogs attacked the child, and by reaching the place so soon, saved her being horribly mangled, as the people whom the screams of the child and the yelps of the savage beasts brought out of the neighboring houses say it was a most frightful affair.

The large dog has been regarded as dangerous for some time, as it has made attacks on a number of grown people who only escaped by flight. Mr Miles' family are unwilling to part with it, and for some reason it is at large much of the time, but a consideration for the welfare of others would seem to suggest the advisability of keeping it under due restraint or exterminating it entirely.

How to Cook Rice.

Rice is becoming much more popular food than heretofore. It is frequently substituted for potatoes at the chief meal of the day, being more nutritious and much more readily digested. At its present cost, it is relatively cheaper than potatoes, oatmeal or other grain diets of any kind. In preparing it only just enough cold water should be poured on to prevent the rice from burning at the bottom of the pot, which should have a close fitting cover, and with a moderate fire the rice is steamed rather than boiled until it is nearly done; then the cover is taken off, surplus steam and moisture allowed to escape, and the rice turns out a mass of snow white kernels, each separate from the other, and as much superior to the usual soggy mass, as a fine mealy potato is superior the water-soaked article.

What the Ember Days Promise.

Wednesday, says that excellent paper, the Altoona Tribune, was the first of the Whitsuntide ember days. The others were Friday and Saturday of this week. There is an old and common belief that if rain falls on the first ember day succeeding Whitsuntide the prospect for a long rainy season thereafter is exceedingly good. It rained Wednesday as usual, and now we'll have to take it as it comes. Indeed we don't see well how the calamity involved in the old superstition could be well avoided unless the ember days this year were eliminated from the calendar, and we have no authority to do that. May came in with a shower, poured and showered and sprinkled all through and went out with the appearance of a steady rain which may reach into the middle of June. Vegetables, trout fishers and base ball players haven't had half a chance this year.

—It was decided by ballot in the Presbyterian Sunday-school, recently, to continue holding its sessions throughout the summer in the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, instead of changing to morning as has heretofore been done at this time of the year.

Eagleville Etchings.

The music which the Eagleville orchestra discoursed in McKean's barber shop with bass viol, violin, &c., not long ago, was regarded as rather wild.

H. W. Hoover is manufacturing a large amount of charcoal. He is also the proprietor of a large store, doing a heavy business and employing three persons. Samuel DeHass is the most prominent personage about the establishment; Mr. Hoover is the proprietor, but is allowed only a few privileges; Mr. Joseph Bumgardner brings up the rear as bookkeeper.

W. W. Clark is building a new residence. It will contain a bay window which will be the abode of his parrot, "Mary." The bird is a fine talker and is known by almost everybody in this yicinity.

Batchelor Joe has changed his boarding place from the Blanchard House to Jacob Glossner's.

The summer schools are in a flourishing condition compared with former years.

A. E. Greyham has laid a new sidewalk. We hope that others will follow his example.

Mr. Harry Schroyer is a veteran wood chopper and an old soldier, having been wounded several times during the late unpleasantness. But he says he would rather face a rebel battery than again witness such a sight as recently presented itself to him. A short time ago he cut a tree down on a steep place and thought to adopt the Dutch way of trimming it, i. e. trim the top first and pull it down the hill. While doing this he discovered a snake. Such a snake! It was coiled up in a tree top in Henry W. Hoover's Rider Hill job. It was about fifty feet long and six inches thick, and was coiled round and round in a circle about four feet in diameter. Mr. Schroyer was about four feet away when he first discovered his snakeship. With an axe in hand and a pocket-knife in the other he retreated. Recovering courage, he went up the hill and cut down a sapling so that in falling it would frighten the snake away. His experiment succeeded admirably. He says that he falls short one half a cord of wood every day just because he keeps a lookout for the reappearance of that snake. JUNIOR.

About the Girls.

Of course, the girls described in the following paragraph live in Lock Haven, Altoona and such places and are never seen in Bellefonte: "A bundle of gew gaws, bounded with a string of flaps and quivers, sprinkled with cologne and set in a carmine saucer is of no use to a man who expects to raise a family of boys on bread and meat. The piano and lace fabrics are very good in their places and so are frills and tinsel; but you cannot make a dixner out of the former, nor a bed blanket out of the latter, and awful as the idea may seem to you, both the dinner and the bed blanket are domestic necessaries. Life has its realities as well as its fancies, but you make it all decoration, remembering the tinsel and tassels and forgetting the bedstead. Suppose a man of good sense and good prospects to be looking for a wife, what chance would you stand to be chosen? You may catch him or you may trip him, but how much better to render yourself worth catching. Merit being caught, you will not need a shrewd and designing mother to help you find a market."

—Russian oppression of the descendents of Abraham was illustrated on Bishop street on Tuesday evening. Two men—one a Hebrew and the other a Gentile—imbibed too much benzine and the former had the temerity to say that he was as good as a Gentile any day. The latter undertook to convince him of the contrary by knocking him down several times. Of course the occurence called forth a large crowd of spectators, and so wild was the excitement throughout the town that for awhile the impression prevailed that an extensive fire was in progress. Neither combatant was able to do the other much harm and they were easily separated. "Behold how great a fire a little spark kindleth."

Accident at Spring Mills.

While several school boys were running the tread power at Grenoble's grain house, in Spring Mills, on Friday, the 26th ult., one of the number, named Amos Gentzell, jumped off while it was in motion and, making a mis-step, fell upon the revolving wheel. He was quite seriously injured before the machinery could be stopped. This should be a warning to young boys not to meddle with machinery or anything else with which they have no business and by which they may be injured.

I have just received the Largest, Finest, and in every way the Best Stock of ever offered in this town. I can show you ware heavier in the metal, finer in the finish, with more weight of silver to the square inch than you ever saw before. I am now buying nothing less than which is a grade heavier than any other. But one of the most important items relating to these goods is the price I can sell them at. Taking the exclusive sale of them in this county enables me to buy large quantities. Large quantities entitles me to the lowest prices and largest rebates. Giving you these advantages enables you to buy these fine goods, never higher, and sometimes lower than the most common goods which are entitled to be called silverware.

Silver Ware

QUADRUPLE PLATE,

Entertainment in Y. M. C. A. Hall.

The opening musical entertainment of the course arranged by the Bellefonte Orchestra was given Thursday evening under the most favorable circumstances. Following the first piece, which was an overture by the orchestra, came a song, "Good bye, sweetheart," by one of our favorites, Mrs. Magee. The piece was in itself beautiful, and rendered in the singer's pleasing style. A selection from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," by the orchestra, was well received, following which Miss Victorine Lyon gave a solo, "On the Danube," which prepared her for the reception of a round of applause after her rendition of "Bunch of Violets." This was a happy selection as her manner added greatly to the effect which the cultured voice of Miss Lyon must produce. A duet, violin and viola, by Dr. Hibbler and Mr. L. Bierly, sustained well their reputation as performers.

"In Native Worth," from the "Creation," concluded the first part as arranged on the programme, but the audience would not be satisfied until Mr. Blanchard favored them with a second song.

"Zampa," a piano duet, reminded one of the wonderful dexterity and exquisite touch which most hands might possess, but which the hands of Miss Onmacht and Miss Nannie Harris do possess.

The encore elicited by Mr. Jno. Lyon in giving the "Mariner" made it obligatory on him to favor his audience with another selection. A trio, "Sweet Dove," by Mrs. Edmund Blanchard, Dr. G. F. Harris and Evan Blanchard, Esq., was nothing short of recherche, and the delighted assembly called loudly until it was repeated. Master Eddie Valentine is a most promising musician, which fact was attested by his execution of Leybach's "Lohengrin," a difficult piece for a much older music student. Lastly the orchestra, by request, gave "Splinters," a popular piece which the common ear can appreciate and which brings one to that exuberant spirit where it would not be wise to remain.

The Bierly Brothers, of Milesburg, are all fine musicians and display willingness in assisting, by their talents, these musical entertainments The flute, violin and many other musical instruments are made to give forth sweet sounds under their skillful touch. Their services are always highly appreciated.

The orchestra wishes to thank all who assisted in making the concert so eminently successful, and to the G. A. R., to Constans Commandery, and to Mr. Teller for the use of chairs. The second concert will probably take place the last of the month.

The Haines-Schrom Wedding.

Last Thursday evening Mr. Martin Haines, of Tyrone, and Miss Mary Schrom, of this place, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents, on Penn street. A large number of the relatives and friends of the bride and groom assembled to witness the ceremony, which passed off in an exceedingly pleasant manner, Rev. George Pennepacker, of the M. E. church, officiating.

The groom looked very handsome, as grooms always do. The appearance of the bride elicited special admiration. Her countenance was radiant with happiness.

After the ceremony the assembled guests partook of an elegant collation. The groom is an excellent young gentleman of decided business abilities. The bride has been a teacher in the Bellefonte public schools during the past two years. She has a large circle of friends who wish her much happiness.

Many handsome presents were received, among them being a silver set, a china set, a beautiful clock, and a large number of silver knives and forks.

Mr. and Mrs. Haines departed Thursday evening on the 8:55 train for an extended wedding tour of the large cities. The happy couple have our hearty congratulations.

Sudden Death at Pine Grove.

Again has the grim monster, Death, visited our midst and struck down in his most sudden and terrible manner one of the prominent and well-known residents of this county. We learn with pain of the sudden death, on Friday last, of Mrs. Jonathan Hess. The particulars of the sad event have not come to our knowledge, but we learn that it was one of those sudden visitations of Providence which remove a loved one from among devoted friends suddenly and unexpectedly, showing that in life we are, as it were, in death. The deceased was in the middle age of life and in the enjoyment of fair health. She leaves a husband and several children. She is the daughter of the late Captain James Dunlap. The funeral services took place on Sunday.

—Heavy rains are a nightly occurrence.

Card of Thanks.

At a regular meeting of Gregg Post, held on the 3d inst., a resolution thanking all who took part in the exercises on Decoration day was unanimously concurred in by that body.

It may be well in us to mention to each one of you who generously extended us substantial aid, to the ladies who came and designed the floral decorations as well as those who subscribed money, that our order is sincerely thankful.

The two councils of the U. O. A. M. —the one from Altoona, the other of this place; the hose companies, Logan and Undine, ever ready to extend the hand of sympathy and fraternity; the Boys' Branch of the Y. M. C. A., under Lieut. Geo. L. Potter, and the gallant National Guard of this place, with whom we share a commander, will each and all exult with us in our mite of success. Neither let us forget to thank if we did nôt forget to pay the band and the drum corps, without which we could not have kept the united step "on the march."

"What will you do for flowers on Decoration day?"—an ever-occurring question which is as certainly answered each year by the children of Bellefonte when they go out and get them.

"The Silver Cornet Band of Pleasant Gap will need supper," said C. J. McMillen, proprietor of the Brockerhoff House "and I'll give it to them" —and so he did.

Comrade William Jones, who raised the money, does not deserve any public thanks, for he has already had them in private, but he acknowledges his indebtedness to those who supplied the money.

The kindness of Mr. William Temple, engineer of the Snow Shoe train, deserves special mention, he having supplied wild honeysuckle from the mountains.

The Rev. J. F. Delong, if we can trust to selection or chance, was designed to deliver the prayer of the ritual, and with the other ministers of the Gospel who could not be present, must enjoy our gratitude for the representation of children from their several Sabbath-schools. To the Rev. J. M. Palmer, of the African M. E. church, the ceremonial of decoration is indebted for the benediction.

Jno. B. Linn, Esq., surprised and pleased his comrades, coming to their aid in time of need, and they have set upon him the seal of a lasting gratitude, nor can we, in our deliberations of thanks, refrain from placing the editors of Bellefonte foremost in our grateful acknowledgments of support. Mr. Furey, Mr. Tuten and Mr. Van Ormer have refused us nothing.

The following were the members of the Ladies' Aid Committee on Decoration: Mrs. E. T. Tuten, Miss Beckie McGinley, Miss Sallie Burnsides, Miss Kate Jackson, Mrs. D. H. Hastings, Mrs. E. A. Smith, Miss Jennie Dare, Mrs. Amos Mullen, Mrs. J. G Love.

Respectfully,
Comrades R. C. Irvin,
C. A. Glenn,
S. H. Williams.

Correspondence from the College.

State College, June 5, 1882.

Mr. Editor:—Now that this institution is becoming notorious if not famous, a few of her "locals" might command a moment's attention from your readers. The charming natural scenery, as appearing to the observer who views the surroundings from the College cupola, would be sufficient reward to anyone who would pay a visit to the College for that purpose alone, to say nothing of seeing the self-satisfied expression upon the faces of seniors, each of whom seems to say: "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course." The nine fortunate young men who constitute the graduating class ended their labors Saturday and are now resting on their laurels. J. G. White, of Milroy, Pa., and Robert N. Tait, of Norfolk, Va., are the "honor men."

The P. S. C. nine will meet the Lewisburg University nine "in the diamond" at Williamsport next Friday with such men as Baldwin, Chesney, Hollis and six strong supporters. The "boys" hope to show the students of their sister College that "kicking foot ball" isn't their only strong point.

Rumor has it that there is a new President just balancing ere making a final descent upon us.

Last Tuesday we were given a respite for the day, and many of of the students availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the neighboring village, but judging by what we can hear they were more intent upon "mashing," as expressed in student vernacular. Professors Hamilton and Jordan delivered addresses at "The Branch" and at Boalsburg respectively.

D. C. Jackson, one of our Sophomores, met with a serious accident while indulging in equestrian exercise. He was forcibly thrown by the stumbling of his horse, the fall breaking his wrist. Dugald has our heartiest sympathy. The little son of Postmaster Stuart fell recently, breaking his collar bone.

Those persons who are to deliver the several addresses to graduates, Y. M. C. A., alumni, and the societies have already been selected, but will be announced later. Suffice to say that anyone attending commencement exercises will feel repaid for so doing. Amicus.

Wedding in the A. M. E. Church.

The wedding of Mr. Robert Butler and Miss Clara Jackson (colored), both of Lock Haven, which was solemnized in the A. M. E. church of this place, Thursday evening, fairly divided the honors with the various other interesting events transpiring in Bellefonte at the same time. The auditorium of the little church building was literally packed, more than half of those present being white people, and many were unable to gain admittance. A few minutes after 8 o'clock the bride and groom with their attendants arrived at the church. They entered in the following order: Robert Nelson and Miss Melissa Graham; Stewart Johnson and Miss Hettie Thomas, niece of the bride; the groom with Mrs. Mary Johnson, aunt of the bride, and A. B. Jackson with the bride.

The lady members of the bridal party were arrayed in white and looked very pretty .The ceremony was long and quite solemn. According to the custom in that church, both bride and groom repeated after Rev. J. M. Palmer, the officiating minister, a long formula containing vows of "love, honor and obedience, for better or for worse," &c. While the congregation sang the Doxology the wedding party left the church.

A reception was given them at the residence of Mr. John Thomas, cakes being brought from Lock Haven for the purpose. Mr. and Mrs. Butler will visit among their friends in this place for several days, before returning to Lock Haven.

Noticable among those present were Gen. Jessie Merrill and family of Lock Haven, and also several prominent Bellefonte people who took a deep interest in the welfare of the contracting parties.

Wedding Presents.

The following is a list of the presents received by Mr. and Mrs. Butler, who were married in the A. M. E. church on Thursday evening, June 1, together with the names of the donors:

Pugh and Miss Clara Valentine, half-dozen silver teaspoons; Mr. Harry Valentine, half-dozen silver forks; Miss Mary Valentine, half-dozen silver knives; Mrs. Poots, of Philadelphia, silver butter dish; Mrs. Jessie Merrill, of Lock Haven, half-dozen silver teaspoons, half-dozen tablespoons and half-dozen forks; Mrs. Stiles, of Lock Haven, half-dozen silver knives; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Taylor, silver pickle stand; Mrs. Malin, pair of linen towels; Mr. Washington Johnston, wash bowl and pitcher; Mrs. Susan Thomas, pair of lace shams; Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Graham, counterpane and a half dozen napkins; Mrs. Sallie Wilson, lunch basket; Mr. John McDonald, pair of glass fruit dishes; John P. A Disastrous Runaway.

On Friday evening, while Mr. Wm. Dale, of Pleasant Gap, was in town his horse became frightened at something and ran away. The animal was attached to a top buggy. It ran out the Lewistown pike at a rapid rate, everything that chanced to be in its path immediately making way for it. It had progressed as far as Mann's axe works when caught by Mr. Daniel Keller, who was returning to town at the time. The top of the buggy was broken and it was otherwise damaged. We believe that no personal injury was caused by the accident.

A BURGLAR FOILED.

Frightened by an Intelligent Colored Man, He Leaves without Securing any Booty.

Between the hours of one and two o'clock a. m. Tuesday a bold attempt at burglary was made in the residence of Mr. Isaac Guggenheimer, No. 21 Linn street. Mr. Guggenheimer has not occupied the house for a long time and during the winter it was rented by Mr. A. Curtin, Jr., and family. Some time ago Mr. Curtin vacated the house, when it was rented by Mr. James Milliken as a place in which to store his furniture. C. A. Whindleton, a colored man who formerly was in the employ of Mr. Milliken is now living with A. O. Furst, Esq., sleeping in Mr. Guggenheimer's house at night. At the hour above mentioned Mr. Whindleton, who sleeps on the second floor, was awakened by a noise of some one ascending the stairs. He stepped to the door of his room, opening it cautiously, and plainly saw the light from the lantern carried by the intruder. When the fellow had almost reached the top of the stairs, Whindleton called in a stern voice, "Halt!" This so startled the burglar, who perhaps was not aware that the house had an occupant, that he extinguished his light and began to retreat. "John, meet that man at the door with the revolver!" again called out Whindleton, addressing an imaginary being. This so frightened the burglar that he fled precipitately down the stairs, uttering an oath as he ran, and made a hasty exit through the rear door. He dropped a chisel and another iron instrument used for prying open doors, which Mr. Whindleton gathered up. So far as is known nothing was taken, and the burglar was probably in search of some rich booty when he was so suddenly stopped. An investigation showed that the burglar entered through a window in the basement. It is thought that the man is someone well acquainted with the premises and not a professional burglar. The action of Mr. Whindleton in so easily frightening him away is to be commended as exhibiting much coolness and self-possession. He also had the forethought to commit the circumstances to writing at an early hour this morning, which manuscript is in our possession.

Fatal Accident at Valentines' Ore Bank.

On Thursday a very serious accident occurred at Valentines' ore bank which resulted in the death of Mr. Theodore Kelley, the engineer. Mr. Kelley was compelled to be absent from his post of duty on Thursday while attending the funerals of his father and his aunt whose deaths had recently occurred. He went to work this morning as usual. Suddenly, however, the eccentric rod of the engine, which had become too hot, swung violently around, striking him in the the head, and inflicting such severe injuries that he lived only a few minutes.

Mr. Kelley was a trusted employe and had served as engineer for a long time. He was about thirty-five years of age. He leaves a wife and two children.

The Last Sad Rites.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mr. Theodore Kelley, which took place in the Catholic church on Sunday afternoon, attracted an immense concourse of people and was one of the most solemn and impressive ever witnessed in this community. The remains were incased in a magnificent casket. One hundred and eighteen vehicles composed the imposing cortege which conveyed the remains to the silent city of the dead. To Chief Burgess Powers and Captain Amos Mullen were entrusted most of the details of the funeral, and its management showed their superior skill and judgment. It was a magnificent spontaneous expression of sympathy and sorrow for one who was respected in life and whose death deeply affected the hearts of all who knew him. Requiescat in pace.

An Unfounded Rumor.

All were exceedingly sorry to learn of the sudden and violent death of Mr. Theodore Kelley, as recorded in the News of Friday, not only because of the manner in which it occurred, but also because he was a man for whom all who knew him entertained the profoundest respect.

It being the culmination of a series of fatalities in his own immediate relationship rendered it the more an occurrence for sorrow and sympathetic and wondering comment. That his death should occur just after returning from the funerals of two of his nearest relatives seemed indeed a strang fatality.

Another report, circulated on Saturday, that Mr. Kelley's brother also died on Friday is, we are happy to say, without foundation. The circumstances are bad enough without making them any worse.

Mid-Summer Festivals.

The season for festivals is rapidly approaching, but we have heard of only two which have been definitely decided upon, and the time for holding them has not been fixed.

The Reformed congregation will hold a festival for the benefit of the furnishing fund of their new church edifice, the expenses for which have not yet been entirely provided for, but which they hope will be met by this means. So far, therefore, as festivals within the church organizations are concerned they will have undisputed possession of the field, and in view of their enterprise in erecting a new church building which is an ornament to the town, are entitled to the patronage of all our citizens.

The Y. M. C. A. has also decided to hold a festival which will probably take place during the coming month. Preparations on an entensive scale will be made for it and it will embrace many new and novel features heretofore unknown to festival annals in this vicinity. The committee of arrangements have been appointed. We will give the proceedings of this committee as the grand scheme approaches consummation. We announce it now to give our readers an opportunity to save their pocket money, and limit their consumption of food in anticipation of the great event.

Soldiers' Orphan Schools.

With the past year 360 applicants for admission into the soldiers' orphan schools have passed the necessary examination, but, owing to the insufficiency of available funds they have been left out. It was thought, when these applications were favorably considered, that an old surplus of $55,000 of former appropriations could be applied to their maintenance, but Deputy Attorney Gilbert decided that this money belonged to the State Treasury. Attorney-General Palmer has just rendered an opinion reversing the previous one on the subject, and the several orphan schools will be reinforced by 360 pupils.

Personal and Particular.

Mr. Calvin Weaver returned from Williamsport Thursday evening.

W. R. Jenkins, of this place, visited Williamsport on Thursday.

Editor Van Ormer accompanied a party to Penn cave on Friday.

Judge Orvis presided at the Clearfield county court last week.

Mrs. Bayard Hicks, who has been visiting in Williamsport for about two weeks, returned home Friday evening.

Mrs. Hammon Sechler, who has been spending a short time in the Quaker City, returned home Friday.

Mr. H. W. Foutz, formerly of Curwensville, was in town Tuesday. We are pleased to learn that he will locate permanently in this vicinity going into partnership with P. B. Crider & Son.

J. Willard Miller, the energetic General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., departed last Mnnday to New Haven, Conn., to attend the conference of General Secretaries of the United States and Canada, which assembles in that city to-morrow.

Mr. Haves Schroyer, who recently severed his connection with the Republican office to enter the employ of the Adams express company at Lancaster, arrived in town Saturday morning and remained until Monday. He looks as well, handsome and prosperous as usual and as he richly deserves to be.

—Only one month until the glorious Fourth.
